A Message from the President

This year has been one of realization. Years of planning and progress are apparent everywhere. Major milestones have been attained. Size alone gives the Broad and Pine Streets restoration prominence. Expansion and integration of the campus is becoming a reality, with the Furness Dormitory — which doubled student housing accommodations — representing just one segment of the transformation of the College, and the Center City community in the process.

Physical growth is only part of the story. Running parallel to this activity is an increased focus on the quality of education. Here too, much has happened to bring us closer to becoming the best visual arts college in the nation.

Recruitment plays a key role in this quest. Education is only as good as the professionals who teach it. We are pleased with the number of distinguished names who have joined our faculty this year. Pleased too, that the caliber of our students also is on the rise. Presidential Scholars number ninety; scholarship winners are from the top percentile of the national high school population.

Through years of unswerving commitment we are emerging as a strong leader — not just regionally, but among all the visual arts colleges. In that role, we are shaping the future of art education through our participation in the Consortium of East Coast Art Colleges, and other associations.

The ultimate test is how we are judged by the world around us. Our greatest testimonial lies in our graduates and in the ways they have utilized their education to make innovative contributions to commerce and culture.

To this end, this report contains a special brochure that spotlights several illustrious alumni and their recent works. As you page through it you will see evidence of originality, creativity and — above all — excellence. Excellence in the artist. Excellence in the products produced. This excellence, in turn, reflects the quality of education provided by the college, establishing a cycle, a continuum of commitment to quality. This, too is realization.

Awards are another indicator of the excellence that the public has come to realize is a part of PCA. Too numerous to list, these awards embrace students, faculty and alumni alike. As a collective community, the College was honored with the Civic Environmental Award presented by the Philadelphia Chapter of AIA for the "expansion of its historic urban campus and for its leadership in the establishment of a new spirit of economic and aesthetic rebirth for South Broad Street . . ." This award is most gratifying for it underlines out rededication to the "Avenue of the Arts", to the City and to its people — a commitment that continues.

Continuity of commitment is highly dependent upon the professionals who make up the PCA Community. New administrative appointments included Joanne Ryan as Dean of Academic Affairs; Kathleen Donohue as Director of Counseling/Career Center; Irene Korsyn as Director of Communications; Susan Webster as Assistant Director of Admissions; and Thomas Delricci as Building Maintenance Supervisor.

Joining PCA's distinguished faculty were Larry Mitnick, Chairman of Architectural Studies; Ben Lifson, Photography; Hester Stinett, Jan Paris and Franz Spohn, Printmaking; James Lloyd, Sculpture; Alan Edmonds and Joseph Finocchiaro, Graphic Design; Charles Kaprelian and George Chapman, Education; Robert Defuccio, Crafts/Wood; Peter White, Jeff Pike, Tony Visco, Elaine Sorrel and Bill Ternay, Illustration. Karen Saler was named a Co-Chairman of the Foundation Department.

Seven new trustees joined the Board. They are: Mary Louise Beitzel of Chappaqua, NY, painter, alumna and member of the Board of the Katonah Gallery in New York; Raymond Dempsey, Chairman and President of Fidelcor, Inc. and Fidelity Bank; Stephen R. Holstad, Partner, Ernst and Whinney; Bruce W. Kauffman, Senior Partner of Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish and Kauffman; Thomas V. Lefevre, President and CEO of UGI Corporation; Joseph Neubauer, President and CEO of ARA Services, Inc.; and Jerry J. Siano, an alumnus and Vice President and Creative Director Worldwide for N.W. Ayer and Company, the internationally known advertising agency. Their expertise will be invaluable to the College as it continues toward the realization of its goals.

Academic Programs

The 1981-82 year saw the crystallization of several new academic programs as emphasis on quality education intensified. An Honors Program was developed to be introduced in the Fall of 1982. Outstanding matriculants will be able to do independent study in both liberal arts and the visual arts. Establishment of a Fine Arts major was announced, cutting across departmental lines, integrating studies in Photography, Sculpture, Printmaking and Painting. An exchange program with the Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science was inaugurated. Similar to a plan already in effect with the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, it allows students to take coursework at either institution without an exchange of tuition.

Attention was also directed to the quality of instruction. Departmental evaluations begun last year, continued. Visiting teams of professionals from outside the College observed and examined specific strengths, needs and potentials of select departments. This past year, Photography and Illustration were visited. This series of independent observations is proving a viable assessment and evaluation tool. Concurrently, student appraisals of faculty were instituted. Standardized forms were distributed during the first and second semesters and data collected made available to the faculty.

A further effort to attract and retain distinguished faculty resulted in a broad revamping of sabbatical procedures in the belief that professional and artistic renewal is essential to the quality of our educational programs. The grant from the Mellon Foundation will make possible future faculty travel and research funding.

While the focus of attention was on the restoration project, considerable work has occurred within Anderson Hall. Prime was the virtual completion of the Albert M. Greenfield Library containing more than 40,000 volumes. A new Faculty/Student Gallery was created on the main floor and its programs for the forthcoming year delineated.

The College's first full-scale Summer Session was introduced this year. Enrollments equalled expectations, attracting students from 26 different colleges including Yale, Smith and the Rhode Island School of Design.

Finally, the years saw the retirement of two senior faculty members: Edna Andrade of the Foundation Department and Albert Gold of Illustration. Both have earned honors too numerous to mention. Their impact on students and colleagues will be long remembered.

Exhibits and Events

Faculty achievements brought great pride to the College and gained broad media attention. The Faculty Show that opened in March 1981 at the Allentown Museum had a prestigious showing at the University of Pittsburgh and an illustrious conclusion at the William Penn Museum in Harrisburg. In Harrisburg, "Broad Spectrum" attracted state senators and other legislators, faculty, students, staff and alumni. More than 40 participated in a gala dinner held at Governor Thornburgh's State mansion. Later in the year, Larry Day of Painting and Rudy Staffel of the Crafts Department were selected to receive the coveted Hazlett Memorial Awards. It was the third year in a row that PCA faculty were so honored.

Diversity set the tone in gallery exhibits. "Projects for PCA", an ongoing annual series, this year featured an environmental installation by Christopher Kohlhofer. "Banshees" by Terry Rosenberg was followed by a fibers exhibit by Ritzi and Peter Jacobi, jointly sponsored by the College and Moore College of Art. An installation by Paul Thek preceded Irving Penn's "Earthly Bodies"—an exhibition of 76 photographs of the female nude. Penn, an alumnus, is acknowledged to be one of the masters of 20th Century American Photography.

Mixed media comprised the exhibit entitled "Production Lines". Sixteen artists/designers presented contemporary production ceramics, glass and jewelry, and more than 500 people attended a symposium dealing with the subject. Panel participants included James Carpenter, Angela Cummings, Dorothy Hafner, Mark Pharis and Ivy Ross. A photographic documentation of the human condition, as recorded by the General Board of Global Ministries of the United Methodist Church, c. 1900-1945, attracted an equally large audience. Entitled "Missionary Chronicles", it presented more than 350 photographs taken throughout the world.

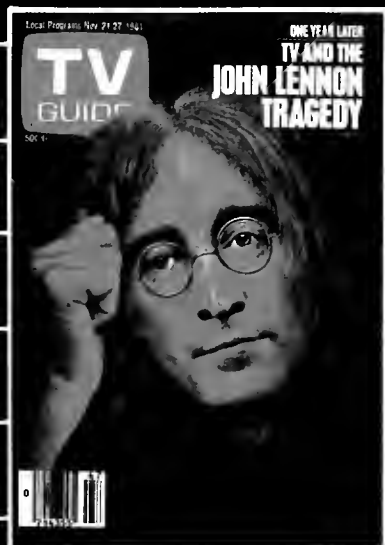

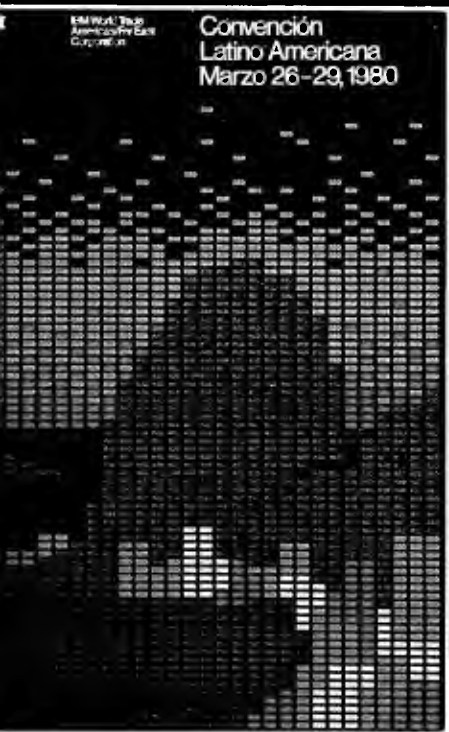

Painting Faculty Forums addressed four topics of interest: "The Influence of Rauschenburg"; "Realism, Reality and Representation"; "Subject Matter, Content and Structure"; and "Politics in Art". The forums drew overflow audiences, as did the lecture series held in conjunction with Villanova and Rutgers Universities. The latter series featured the eminent photography critic Max Kozloff, painter Judy Pfaff, printmaker Caro Antreasian, sculptor James Surls, and video artist/photographer William Wegman.

The Annual Student Exhibition climaxed the year, showcasing work of graduates and undergraduates whose work was indicative of the high degree of talent developing at the College.

EXCELLENCE CREATING EXCELLENCE

The more complex our world becomes the more we have need for the unique skills and perceptive insights of the professionally trained artist.

Not just in the fine arts—to delight the eye and please the senses—but the innovative genius that translates advanced technology into products and environments that enrich the quality of life.

No where are the benefits more apparent than in America. Look around you. Almost every aspect of life reflects this aesthetic truth; from fashions, fabrics and furniture, cars, planes and computers to buildings and baby buggies. Literally everything we see or touch bears the unmistakable imprint of some unseen artist's innate creativity.

The artists whose work is shown here—all alumni of the Philadelphia College of Art—have already made an impact on our culture. Individually, they enhance our lives. Collectively, they have helped American industry achieve its still enviable position among the world powers.

The Philadelphia College of Art

If alumni achievements are any measure of the quality of their education, then PCA is fulfilling its mission. The College ranks as one of the five best private art colleges in the country. Founded in 1876, the year of the Centennial, it is a professional, accredited degree-granting institution.

There is something almost mystical about surroundings designed by three 19th century luminaries in the world of architecture. A transfer of inspiration, perhaps, that lends continuity to the artistic spirit. The historically-registered Haviland-Strickland-Furness buildings have long been a cornerstone of the campus. Recent restoration and renovation of this superb complex allows students and faculty alike, the opportunity to work and live and grow in an exceptionally fertile environment. Furness is now a modern dormitory. And the College's location in the heart of culturally-rich Philadelphia adds still another aesthetic dimension to student life.

PCA's educational philosophy is predicated upon the belief that art contributes perceptibly to world culture. Nurturing and developing young artists to assume this special role is the College's raison d'être.

Traditions that have shaped the arts since the Renaissance continue. But because true creativity and originality can flourish only in an intellectual milieu that challenges both the mind and the senses, PCA provides a broad liberal arts-enhanced curriculum. Nine visual arts programs are offered within the divisions of Fine Arts, Crafts and Design. The result is a cross-pollination of learning experiences. Students develop highly perceptive visual skills that find their final form in pragmatic solutions to industry problems, as well as in the fine arts.

PCA's distinguished faculty is nationally known and respected. Many show regularly in the country's leading galleries and are represented in major museums and prestigious private collections. This is reflected in the classroom, so that ultimately, there exists a veritable cycle of excellence, from teacher to student and from artist to product concept and execution. Excellence creating excellence. Small wonder that so many PCA alumni stand in the very forefront of American design.

A passionate affair between the world's most desirable woman and the world's greatest soldier brings down empires.

Mark Antony is an extraordinary tragic hero—ruler of a third of the Roman world, "demigod of the earth," but doomed by his passion. And in Cleopatra, he has met his match. Brilliant, funny, jealous, treacherous and, above all, the supreme courtesan, Cleopatra becomes, in Shakespeare's masterly hands, the most fascinating woman of her own or any other age.

When the immovable woman meets the irresistible man, the battle of the sexes is a delight to watch.

This is undoubtedly one of the most high-spirited comedies that Shakespeare ever created. It was funny when it was written and it's just as funny today. And in the end, when the suddenly demure Kate lectures the two other wives, isn't she having the last laugh?

Shylock and justice versus Portia and mercy. Only a woman's wit stands between Antonio and death.

Because the play reflects Elizabethan prejudices against Jews, it has aroused controversy in modern times. But the play's Christians are almost as unappealing as the vengeful Jew. And Shylock, though hardly a sympathetic character, has some of the most moving lines in the play. Great dramatist that he was, Shakespeare has looked past the stereotype to find the universal human qualities.
